THE CONSPIRACY CASE NEAR ITS END.

The Defense Introduce no Testimony But Rely Upon a Motion to Dismiss

The afternoon session of yesterday's proceedings commenced shortly after two o'clock, the courtroom being crowded to its utmost capacity.

Thomas Wright was the first witness called. He testified: "I know Walker and had a conversation with him about a month ago. Walker advised me not to join the new rifle company, giving as a reason for his advice that there might be trouble and he did not want any friends of his to be hurt. About two weeks ago at Noite's we had another conversation, in which Walker said something about 'blowing up.' The 'blowing up' was to occur if the decision of the United States should be against

On cross-examination the witness admitted that he had told several friends about the conversation he had had with Walker. Simon von Topaz was next called. He said he was a member of the regu lar company under Captain Good. He knew Walker and had talked with him on several occasions. He met him for the first time on the corner of Hotel and Fort streets. Walker asked him how he was getting along; he replied that he was getting $40 a month and good "P. G. grub." Walker then invited him to take a drink, and the invitation was accepted. When they parted, Walker asked to see him again, and remarked that everything would be all right by and by. Two days after Bethel street. They had another drink, down to his place and he smiled and and during a conversation Walker informed him that everything would be changed soon, as the Provisional Government was to be overthrown. Walker told him to advise the members of the company to lay down their arms and not fight in case there was any trouble. He wanted witness to get the names of the boys who would consent to turn traitors, so he could give the list to the Queen. In return for this the witness was to get a position in the Custom House as soon as the old order of things was restored. Walker said that the right or left, that is Indian fighting. Government attempted to interfere with place in the Royal saloon. He had a the matter over and did not get angry friend, Prescott by name, with him. The trio adjourned to a rear room and were joined by Sinclair. The latter, however, was told that his presence was not wanted, so he withdrew. Walker then said that they would soon overthrow the P. G., but had been advised by Blount and Wodehouse to bepatient. He also said that the Royalists had good backers in the persons of Claus Spreckels and Campbell. He had 1000 men well armed and equipped, who would fight the P. G., and the best thing the members of the regular company could do was to quit work. Walker said he would place men outside of the Executive building to prevent the volunteer forces from going inside the fence; an entrance to the building was to be gained through an underground passage. The witness also stated that Sinclair said that he had been in favor of annexation, but was not in favor of a missionary government. He and Walker could defeat to leave the company. Walker told duce any testimony.

A. S. Prescott testified that he be longed to the company of which Von Topaz is a member. He saw Walker and Sinclair on the 21st inst. Von Topaz was present at the time. Walker explained his plans and said that they had 1000 men as fully equipped as the Provisional Govern guardian for A. A. Doiron, an insane seven lepers in the valley and that he ment army. He had been under fire before and discovered that a rush from a large crowd of men always created a panic. He had access to the water mains and, in addition, he had a battery connected with the Executive building, which was unknown to the Government. Walker said that he had some men secreted about the Queen's probate of will; Estate of W. J. Roche, Oscar White. place and the remainder were out drilling. Spreckels and Campbell were to assist with large sums of money, Spreckels with one million and Campbell with one-half that amount. The witness said that Walker informed him that the assault on the Government was to be made if the decision of the United States should be against them.
